The Billy Goat Trail

The Billy Goat Trails have been popular with hikers since the mid-1800s. Comprised of three separate trails accessible from the towpath, and designated Sections "A", "B", and "C", the Billy Goat Trails offer beautiful views of the Potomac River. Please choose the appropriate trail by its difficulty level.

Section "A" is extremely strenuous and involves a lot of rock scrambling and the need for good balance. With its difficult terrain, the 1.7 mile hike takes most visitors 2-3 hours to complete. Visitors in less than optimal health, with small children, or those not experienced or properly outfitted, should consider other trail hiking options. Section "A" starts below Great Falls near the Stop Gate and ends on the towpath just upstream from the park's Anglers access point. Dogs are not permitted.

Section "B" is a moderate hike. Located just downstream from Anglers, in the Marsden Tract area, "B" contains a few small rock scrambles and provides a quieter atmosphere than "A". It is the best of the three for birding, especially in the spring.

Section "C" is an easy walk. Although there are still a few rock outcroppings, most of the trail is wooded. It is located just downstream from "A" and "B", in the Carderock area of the park. Great hike for spring wildflowers and fall colors or during the hottest summer days.

Special Note About Bear Island

Section "A" traverses one of the most biologically diverse areas in the country, Bear Island. Topography, geography and regular flood events have created some of the rarest and most sensitive habitats. Because of this, the National Park Service and The Nature Conservancy jointly own and manage Bear Island. Please lessen your impact by remaining on the blazed trail and staying off the island when the trail is closed. This will help preserve the uniqueness of the island and the trail for future generations of hikers.

Trail Safety Recommendations

- Allow enough time to finish your entire hike before sunset - trails are difficult to follow and distinguish after dark. Hiking trails after dark greatly increases your risk of being lost, injured and/or stranded.
- Be prepared for environmental extremes - rocky outcroppings tend to amplify extreme weather conditions. Lack of adequate shade and protection from the elements can also greatly increase hikers' exposure.
- Carry adequate fluids & replenish fluids regularly in summer months - dehydration and heat stress can lead to heat stroke and death.
- Wear appropriate footwear - adequate soles and ankle support can prevent injuries.
- Be aware of your surroundings and locations - knowing your location on the trail will help in an emergency situation. Because of the difficult terrain, most rescues, even for a hurt ankle, often involve dispatching boats and/ or a helicopter.
